JUNE GRASS FIRE THREATENS BIG LOSS

ing Destruction of Grain and Hay.

Special to The Tribune.

OGDEN, July 19.—For four hours, beginning this forenoon at 11:30, the Ogden fire department, some of the police force, and all of the inhabitants of Burch Creek and Riverdale, the southern precincts of Ogden, fought a fierce grass and brush fire. The department did not take the apparatus, but went down to the fight to save property with the most primitive tools, and finally beat it out.

The fire was started by cinders from a defectively equipped locomotive on the Oregon Short Line. The blaze started in the June grass, which at this season of the year is ripe for fire, and in which a fire, when once started, spreads rapidly. High on the bench south of Burch Creek it burned fiercely and soon communicated itself to the brush, and threatened the ripe grains. A big srea of growing and ripened rie was burned; and a section of ripe wheat of 300 acres was cut into by the forks of fire, entailing a heavy loss. Only the efficient efferts of the forces that went to fight the fire, and the work of the residents of Riverdale and Burch Creek, prevented the blaze from crossing the Weber river and wiping out the haystacks, granaries and barns of Riverdale.

Orrin Hadlock of the Ogden police force went down on horseback and organized a fire guard force, with tenms and plows. All this time the wind was strong from the south, and the fire was rapidly approaching rich grain fields and other farm property. The smoke blew into Ogden so dense that the atmosphere became a redycllow glow, and the odor from the fire was plainly evident to the nostrils.

and the odor from the fire was plainly evident to the nostrils.
Idadlock's brigade plowed many furrows on the south side of Burch Creek, for a stretch of three miles, from east to west, and this suppressed the fire.
The area burned, however, was three miles east and west and two miles south to north. The estimate of damage to property will be made later. The people of the city pesthouse had a close call for their lives and only for the efficient efforts of Chief Paine and his firemen the buildings would have been consumed.

At 6:30 this morning the department had a long run to the Ogden creamery, north on Washington avenue, where imperfect insulation of the electric wires had started fire in the refrigerator, where 40,000 pounds of butter were stored. There was very little damage to the structures and the fire was extinguished by the chemical, but the storage of butter was sumposed to the storage of butter was supposed to be damaged by smoke.

Several days passed before anything was heard of the Death valley party, and some began to fear that the flend of the burning plain had claimed again its victims. Then the auto with its occupants came limping back into the mining camp, sightless Shea, pluckily sitting at the steering wheel.
